

Happa, the forest-kid

~ All the fish have disappeared from the river.~

Once upon a time there was a big, big forest.

A river ran deep into the forest.

Bubble, Bubble, Bubble, Bubble

Deep in the big, big forest Happa was taking a bath.

He loves taking a bath.

Splash, Splash, Splash

"Aah this is lovely" said Happa, he closed his eyes and drifted off.

Splash!!

Suddenly Froggy jumped into the bath. "Oh no what happened?" screamed Happa.

Froggy calmed himself down and explained; "All the fish have disappeared from the river".

Happa and Froggy ran to check the river when they arrived at the river, they found the bears looking confused and worried.

"Hey Happa" shouted one of the bears,

"Can you do us a favor? All the salmon have disappeared from the river, can you go to check the ocean for us and find out where they are?"

"Sure, no problem"

Happa followed the river through the big, big forest and then through a big, big city until he came to the ocean.

When Happa reached the ocean he was shocked

"Oh no! it's all red" said Happa.

All of the animals and fish in the ocean looked poorly.

"Oh dear, oh dear, I must help them", said Happa.

He scratched his head a little. "Ah I have an idea"

Happa jumped into the air and shouted

“AHH, come on, lets go!!”

When Happa shouted a cloud of leaves flew from the forest and stuck to his body.

Za Zaaaa Peta, Za Zaaaaa Peta,

Happa grew bigger and bigger.

Happa spread his leaves all around, covering the red ocean.

Ba Ba, baaaa Babababa Baaaa

Happa and his leaves dived into the sea to try and soak up the red dirt.

Slowly, slowly, bit by bit the sea turned back to a beautiful shade of blue.

The sea returned to blue as Happa soaked up the red dirt, he grew weak and tired.

"I don't feel well" he thought.

Just as he started to slip underwater a bird swooped down and plucked him out and dried him in the sun.

The fish also helped and dried out the leaves in the sun.

"Thanks guys pheww!! I feel much better."

Thanks to Happa and the forest the sea went to natural,

then the salmon returned to the river.

"Yapee thanks Happa" Everybody lived happily ever after.